

There is no law prohibiting having biological weapons or nerve gas on his/her property, or even walking on government property with such items: ipso facto it is now one's RIGHT to have such weapons of "mass destruction."

Hell, the U.S. patent office has patents on the manufacture of nerve gas that anyone can obtain simply by sending a $1.50 to the Patent Office in Washington, D.C. (P.O. Box 8). These same patents are verboten to English citizens from their own patent office, which doesn't surprise me based on the mistrust of the UK government against private ownership of semi-automatic rifles.
